The extent to which it will be possible to offer a choice of curricula must, of course, depend on the number of Students in attendance at the Centre and on the strength and qualifications of the staff. It is probably only in the larger Centres where there are, say, 30 students (3 classes of 10) that any attempt at genuine specialisation will be found to be practicable. In the smaller Centres where a double time-table is out of the question, it is suggested that the work should be so arranged that the necessary minimum of work in the compulsory subjects can be overtaken in the earlier...
